Delivery of our reports

Our “AmpGFX Reports” are posted on our website when completed. An email is sent to all subscribers with the title, an executive summary, and a link to the website to view the whole report.

If you are a subscriber and you have saved your log-in details in your web browser, the report should automatically open when you click on the website link. Otherwise, you will need to log-in to the website with your log-in details to view the report.

The report may be printed from the website. We remind you that this is for your individual use and you agree not to redistribute the report without prior permission.

We do not have a regular schedule for the release of new AmpGFX reports. In most weeks we release one to three reports, although there will be around five weeks per year when reports may be more sporadic during which time we may be taking a break or travelling for marketing and client liaison.

We expect there to be from 80 to 125 reports per year of varying length and depth of analysis, of around 5 to 15 pages of market analysis and charts.

We provide no guarantee on the quantity or length of reports.

If for some unforeseen reason our research reports are unavailable for an extended period, we will consider you eligible for a credit or refund on a pro-rated amount for the period of non-service.

Delivery of Trading Strategy and Market Commentary

We trade our capital in a trading account owned by our company. Trading authorisation is only provided to Greg Gibbs (Founder, Director, Analyst, & Portfolio Manager, AmpGFX). Our trading may only be conducted through the Saxobank on-line platform in the single account that is held in the company name.

More details on limits and controls on our trading, and managing conflicts of interest are provided in our Financial Services Guide, and our Policy and Procedures document. These documents are available under the ‘Disclaimers’ menu on our website.

If you are a subscriber to a ‘Real Time membership’ we send you an email as soon as is practicable after we have executed a new trade, or updated an order in our trading account.

The email includes the financial product traded (most often a currency-pair), the size of trade expressed in a number of “units,” and the price of the transaction (most often an FX exchange rate).

“Units” relates to our company’s internal measure of ‘value at risk’. It depends on the size of our trading capital and the historical volatility of the financial product being traded. This is periodically reviewed.

We do not disclose the exact amounts we have traded.

We do provide a measure of the initial capital at risk when the trade is first initiated. This is based on the percentage loss we would incur if our stop loss order is triggered; excluding any additional loss for order slippage.

The email will most often also include the following additional information: a stop loss and take profit order associated with the trade, a commentary explaining the rationale for the trade, and a list of existing outstanding trades, along with their associated orders.

For the purpose of ensuring that the email notification of the trade is sent promptly after each trade, the additional information described above may be sent in a second follow up email, allowing more time for it to be prepared, if required.

This second email is sent if the additional information is not included in the initial trade notification.

In summary, Real-Time Briefings covering our trading strategy include:

1. Financial product traded (most often a currency pair);
2. Size of trade expressed in a number of units;
3. Entry price (most often an FX exchange rate);
4. Commentary on the rationale for the trade;
5. Stop loss and take profit orders;
6. Our initial capital at risk (%) if our stop loss is triggered at the rate (i.e. excluding slippage); and
7. A list of outstanding trades; including units, price, orders, capital at risk.

Periodically, at least monthly, all the email notifications that have been sent to 'Real-Time members' are uploaded to the company website. These notifications, in this way, are stored on our website. These notifications can be viewed at any time, including the history, for at least the last year, on the website by 'Real-Time members', using their individual login credentials.

We do not guarantee a minimum length of time between when we trade and you receive an email. We do not guarantee that you will receive a message every time we trade. We send messages after every trade as soon as possible. However, the delivery of these messages will depend on the telecommunication network both at our end and yours. In most cases, we trade from our office, but we may also be out of the office for business or personal travel. In which case we trade and send messages from a laptop computer; this may involve service disruptions and longer delays in preparing and sending messages.

This service is intended to provide you with detailed insight into our trading strategy, over and above that provided in our AmpGFX report. However, we remind you that our advice is general and does not take into account your personal circumstances, trading involves significant risk, you are responsible for your own trading and risk management, and we do not guarantee that you will not make losses if you attempt to replicate our trading strategy.

You will not be able to replicate our trading performance for the following reasons.

1. There is a time delay between when we trade and you receive our Trading Strategy messages. As such, you will not achieve exactly the same entry levels in most cases if you attempt to replicate our trades.

2. If market prices reverse direction around our market orders, it is possible that our order is executed independently of an order that you may have entered with your broker at the same level, or vice versa.

Trading Performance

Our related market orders are executed on a buy-on-stop-if-bid, or sell-on-stop-if-offered at the order level. As such, we accept some slippage beyond our order levels on stop loss orders.

Once a month, the returns from this trading activity are updated on our Website in the “Trading Performance” section.

The returns are calculated directly from the actual returns reported by Saxobank for the one trading account for our company.

The returns are expressed in percentage of a notional capital amount.

The notional capital amount is reset at the beginning of the calendar year. The actual value of the returns reported by Saxobank in the company account are applied to the notional capital that then fluctuates through the course of the year, according to the impact of these actual returns, and only these returns.

Managing your Subscription

You can manage your personal details, including the email address used for login and messages received from us, and your password on your profile page: ampGFXcapital.com/profile.

From here you can view and manage your subscription. This includes upgrading your subscription from a free trial to an ‘AmpGFX membership’ and further to a ‘Real Time membership’.

If you “view your membership details” from your profile page, you can also choose to unsubscribe from our memberships.

If you unsubscribe, you will still have the same access to our publications on our website and receive our emails and messages until the end of your current subscription period. At the end of this subscription period, you will not be charged for renewal, and you will no longer be able to access the full publications on our website.

When you sign up for a Free Trial, you will receive the AmpGFX report for two weeks, around 3 to 6 reports. You will also be able to read our archive of past AmpGFX reports.

We also send you our ‘Real Time Trading Strategy Briefings’ during the trial period.

On registering for a free trial, you are subject to the same terms and conditions described above in this document for subscribers; including restrictions on sharing your login details and re-distributing reports.
